Implementation Best Practices

Planning is key to a smooth implementation. Here are tips from our partner schools.

Before the School Year

- Make sure you know who your school's Pre-AP coordinator is
- Get familiar with the course framework for the Pre-AP course(s) you're teaching.
- Meet with your colleagues to plan how to use your current curricular resources to align with the framework. The framework is not a curriculum.
- We recommend you review course frameworks for all Pre-AP courses that your school will offer, even for subjects you don't teach, if time permits. We've heard that teachers find it helpful to plan and pace across subjects because the courses support each other instructionally.
- Explore preap.org where you'll find the program requirements, FAQs, and more.
- Complete the required professional learning, if you haven't already. You can do it either online or in a 4-day Summer Institute (available at locations around the country).
- Get familiar with Pre-AP Classroom, where you'll find resources such as model lessons and assessments.
- Check preap.org for news and updates.

During the School Year

- At the beginning of the school year, work with your coordinator to determine a plan for helping students create their accounts and access Pre-AP Classroom.
- Complete at least one Online Scoring Module for performance tasks, a program requirement.
- Teach your course, aligning instruction to the course framework.
- Over the school year, at appropriate points, administer at least 1 of the 2 learning checkpoints per unit and all the performance tasks.
- If selecting to use the final exam, administer it at the end of the year, during the testing window.
- Remember that it may take time to adjust your instruction—and that's OK. Connect with your fellow Pre-AP teachers early and often to share experiences and best practices.
